Are you interested in gaining teaching experience as part of an interdisciplinary teaching team?

APPLY TO TEAM TEACH IDS 220: WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE HUMAN?

This course, offered every spring through the Institute for the Liberal Arts, is an always changing exploration of the human experience, team taught by graduate student instructors from the humanities, the social sciences and the sciences, under the guidance of two ILA faculty mentors (Robyn Fivush and Kim Loudermilk).

As part of an interdisciplinary teaching team, you will learn methodological and pedagogical approaches that will continue to inform your teaching throughout your career.

Members of the teaching team will meet (remotely) twice during the Fall semester to discuss the specifics of the course to be offered Spring 2021, Tuesday/Thursday 4:20 – 5:35. All members of the teaching team will share responsibilities for all aspects of the course, including developing the topics, syllabus, readings, presentations, leading class discussions and group activities and designing and grading assignments.

TO APPLY:
Send CV and a brief statement explaining how your research relates to the question "What does it mean to be human?" to Robyn Fivush psyrf@emory.edu by October 23, 2020

SELECTED STUDENTS
• $2,000 stipend