The Impact of Climate Change on Health

בס"ד

Back by popular demand, we are delighted to have Professor Ian Hamilton. A session at our recent Havdallah service was not enough!

He will talk to us about how climate change threatens to undermine the past 50 years' of gains in public health. However, tackling climate change could be the greatest global health opportunity of the 21st century. He will explore both the drivers of climate change that affect human health and the actions that Government and individuals can take, to both address climate change and protect the health of us and future generations.
